GOULD'S ENROLLMENT All interested in the formation LESS AS SCHOOL OPENS

The fall term of Gould Academy opened Tuesday. The enrollment for the school this year is somewhat reduced from previous years. This condition seems to be universal and is due to increased employment among the boys. This is shown by the fact that there are approximately 20 less boys. There are 20 more girls than boys in the present enrollment. The following

Announcement

Hannaford Bros., wholesale grocery and produce company of Portland, have for the past two years been the supply house for both Clover Farm and Red & White groups. In the interest of economy, by eliminating duplication of expense — such as salesmen for both groups, trucks for both groups, stocks of goods for both groups, etc.—and through agreement with some sixtyfour Clover Farm Stores, it has been decided to merge the Clover Farm and Red & White.

The best features of each will be retained, under the banner Red & White, which is the oldest and one of the largest and strongest voluntary groups in America, having thousands upon thousands of Red & White stores operating internationally in both countries of North America.

The Pine Tree Division, as this group is known, consists of one hundred forty-four stores located in Maine and Eastern New Hampshire.

We are authorized to sell all goods bearing the Red & White label with a Money Back Guarantee. This store will be known as Burns' Red & White Store.

The various railway labor unions are now making wage demands on the carriers which, if granted in entirety, would increase the railroads operating expense by the incredible sum of $900,000,00 a year.

A simple set of figures illustrates just what this would mean to the travelers and shippers of the United States.

Last year, total passenger fares collected by all the American railroads aggregated $417,000,000-less than half as much as the unions are now demanding in higher wages!

The railroads average revenue per car of freight last year was $129.89. So it would take nearly 7,000,000 carloads of freight to pay for only the increased cost of the stood for so many years, and will railway unions' demands. The moral is clear. Granting of these astounding wage demands would make it necessary to immensely increase railroad charges for passenger and freight service.

IN SPITE of great numbers of active Germans and Italians, Nazi-Fascist pressure has had less effect in the Andean republics of Chile and Peru than in the countries of the east coast. Italians in Peru have tried to court favor with government through influential nationals in that country. Their Fascist friends from Spain have attempted to woo the aristocratic conservatives by harping on the importance of cultural ties with the Old World. Although ardent in its support of the fatherland, the large German colony in Chile has exerted little or no influence upon the political policies of President Pedro Aguirre Cerda and his government. Geography and local politics have been among the chief stumbling blocks to non-American political activities in these countries. Unlike the countries to the east, the Pacific coast nations are not particularly worried about an Axis attack by force. Ingenious Nazis and Fascists may conceive of the possibility of attacking Brazil and Argentina and maintaining seabound transportation to them, but it is hardly possible that any of them can see a way of getting sufficient naval forces to the west coast of the continent to carry out a successful attack, or back up any coup d'etat they might help to effect.

Liberal Trend in West

They also find in western South America a strong tendency toward liberal and even radical government. The Leftist, or Popular Front, administration and Congress in Chile are just the opposite of a Fascist regime. Peru, under the administration of Presider. Manuel Prado, is experiencing the most liberal and democratic regime in twenty years.

But Nazi propagandists continue to battle us on the economic front in Chile and Peru. Here as elsewhere they lose no opportunity to play up the difficulties of trade with the United States. They point to the copper industry as the great example of how the Yankees get control of the great national resources of a country, the products of which the United States does not need and cannot buy.

Many Chileans themselves relargest copper mine, located 10,000 feet up in the Andes, at Chuquicamata, Chile Your copper investments in this republic alone run into the hundreds of millions. You also built up the great copper industry in Peru. Copper is the export from each of these two stiff collars and certain fine grades largest industry and the largest countries. Yet in normal times practically none of this product can be sold in the United States. Markets must be found for it in other parts of the world."

The Nazis repeat and amplify the same sentiments and add that with the coming of peace (and of course with a victorious Germany) the nations of the "New Order,' all under the leadership of the Nazis, will need copper and many other Chilean products. "When this war broke out," they say, 'Germany had, through its trade, become a tremendous factor in Chile's economic life. She was buying minerals in increasing quantities. More important still, she was buying wool, wines, timbers and beans, an important export, all of which put profits into the pockets of native Chilean farmers and peasants, instead of the coffers of rich foreigners."

The solution to the problem of our commercial relations with both Chile and Peru, or the possibility of relieving them from European economic pressure, is by no means easy. Fortunately, we will still be a large market for nitrate of soda and rodine. Chile also possesses important deposits of manganese of the finest grade. Like Argentina and Uruguay, if assured a steady market she could increase the production of carpet UPTON wool and sheep and lamb skins, as well as animal furs. Chile is one of the original homes of the chinchilla, one of the rarest of all for two weeks. fur-bearing animals. There are possibilities for the increased purfruits. Peru Vanadium Source

To the Peruvians, Nazi agents point out that when the war is over, the United States will buy practically none of their copper; buy most of Peru's exports. Fortunately, for us, Peruvian economy is much more diversified than that of her neighbor, Chile. She posa number of important materials which we buy from non-American countries. Aside from copper and oil, she is a large producer of silver and gold and has the world's phens High School this year leading source of vanadium. SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER 1—Six men traveled the Chiscougamau trail in the wilds of north-art Canada. Six men died. They were reported drowned in the rapids. Mutarings around the camp fires expressed etiser things. Carry Finlay, whose brother life was one of the six; Red Malone and Blaise, a half-breed guide, in the suite of surveyors, arrive to investigate deaths. Finlay had received an anonymous letter declaring that the men were surfaced. There is a suspicion that lake Isadore, big fur man, has made an important gold strike in the Waswandi country and will stop at nothing a keep prospectors out.

CHAPTER II—The inhabitants are in percor of Isadore and his right-hand man, rete-Blanche CHAPTER III—On the second day out, sust as they had safely passed the worst of the rapids, the three investigators were ambushed from shore. Garry and Blaise were slightly wounded.

CHAPTER IV-From Indians Blaise barned ten days later that there is much excitement among them over a big bird" from the south, and that there is talk that three men perished in the Hottaway.

CHAPTER V—Finlay and Mulone visit Leaders in his magnificent home. A sly attempt to poison them is frustrated by a clever trick by Malone.

CHAPTER VI—Wabistan, chief of the Montagnals, tells Finlay that the six men who lost their lives on the Waswanipi where shot, and talks of a "bird" that makes a loud noise.

CHAPTER VII—Wabistan shows Fin-ley the grave of his brother Bob. Garry dentifies the remains and notes the ab-sence of a ring that Bob always were, Carry learns that Tete-Bianche is hunt-

CHAPTER VIII — The Indians have been stirred up to believe that the surveyor's transit is an "evil eye" that is causing sickness among their children. Finlay gets a note from Lise, daughter of Isadore, with whom he has fallen in love, imploring him to help her escape from Isadore, whom she fears. Garry fears a decoy.

CHAPTER IX

Two days later a Peterboro hung offshore a few miles cast of Isadore's fur-post. In the boat v. man mearched through binoculars for a ennoe paddled by a woman.

"It it's an ambush, Blaise, she won't show up," insisted Finlay, "for they'll expect me to land early at the beach to walt for her. They'll be there and will hop on me at once. What would they gain by waiting and bringing her into it? She might got hit."

"Mebbe so!" grunted Blaise, his face gloomy with apprehension.

"It she does show up, Garry, what are the orders?" demanded Red.

"If this Using is straight, I can't have her think that I haven't trusted her. You're to keep out of sight behind that first point until five o'clock, then move around and pick me up. She'll leave before that."

"Chief, you're crazyl" exploded Malone. "That spruce point's a mile from the little sand beach. Suppose they exich you with her? We're out of the picture! We can't reach you!"

"I tell you, Red, they'll never let her come if it's an ambush. There'd be no object in it. It she does come, she'll see that I trust her-believe in her. Dan't you realize how humiliat-Ing It would be to know that I think her capable of tricking me like that -that I suspect her and am bringing · guard?"

"Oh, I see what you mean, but I don't like it. I want to be handy in care of trouble."

"Thank you, Red." Carry ogain raised the glasses. "There she is!" he announced, quielly. He was conscious of the sudden pick-up of his heart. "Whew!" he murmured, as a wave of elation best through him, "have I got it as bad as that an

The Peterburo reached the spruce point and Garry stoyed out, "So long, Blause! See you soon and I'll have something to tell! Bo'-je'. Redi

But Malone and the eager Flame Jained Finlay on the shore.

"What's the idea"" asked Garry. "Going to kits me good by?"

"Take this, Garry." Red pushed a black automatic into Piolog's hand. "If may be meend."

"No. I've got my service .45. She's the sweetest run I ever owned. I don't need this,"

"Take it for me, will you, Garry?" But Finlay sloyd his head, "So long, RedI" He stooped and patted the nervous airedale, "Bo'-io'. Flame, old pall Can't come this time! Slay with Red!"

With a wave of his hand Finlay started on his long walk. Lise Demarais was there waiting, when he reached the white beach. He suddenly realized how she had obsessed his thoughts since he last saw her grey face that night at Isadore's. And now, in her desperation she had turned to him.

Lise stood beside her canoe. 'Somehow I knew you'd come!'

She grasped his hand. Warm with color from her long paddle, she was even lovelier than he had remembered her. "Could any man have refused to come after such a letter?" "Yes, knowing what you do, most men would have been afraid. They wouldn't have trusted me."

"But I'm a mind reader, as I told you. And I'm worried about you, Lise Demarais,'

"You're also a brave man," There was a look in her sloe-black eyes that started his blood singing. "Let's sit down. It's a long story." She threw herself on the sand, offered him a cigarette from a silver! case and lit one herself. For a time she smoked, clasping her knees while she gazed straight before her under brows like black brush strokes on her transparent skin.

His eager gaze moved from the dark cloud of her long bob and the brilliant eyes to her round throat.

"I don't know why I should have turned to you in my trouble," she began, "unless it's because you're in great danger yourself. Don't you realize they won't let you finish this survey-won't let you leave this country?"

"Forget the survey! I know Tele-Blanche is after us. I saw him at the head of the lake, We'll take care of him. I came here to learn why you've got to leave Isadore's place and when,"

"I was frantic when I wrote you. It must have sounded delirious and strained but I was desperate. I'd just had a terrible scene with Jules. He insists on my marrying Fellx Blondell, his partner. I've refused time and time again. But he won't listen, Blondell handles the business in Montreal. He's coming in the August plane. He drinks hard when he's here and I'm alraid of him."

Finlay's face was flint-hard as he listened.

"Vulca told me I'd had my chance and refused it," she went on, her breath quickening while her pulse beat in her threat. "He said when Blondell came in August I'd have neither his excepally nor his protecThink of one's stepfather saying a thing like that!"

Finlay's eyes were savage with dancing lights. "Isadore said that to you?"

"Yes and more. It was ghastly! You don't know Jules Isadore!" she cried. "He can purr like a cat and be so smooth-so charming. But he's as pitiless as a wolf. He killed my mother with his women and his heartlessness. Of course, he's given me a home, education, clothes. But his word has always been law. Corinne and I live like children; are told nothing. He's so secretive. Why we're positive there's something queer going on here, now, at Waswanipi, but we don't know what it

Finlay was alive with interest. "Queer? What do you mean?"

"Every summer, in August, plane flies down from the north. Later, it goes south but it carries no fur. Why should a plane fly here every August and go south empty?"

Garry Finlay, also, wanted the answer to that question. At last he had struck something, "That's strangel" he said, his face as impassive as wood. 'It always comes in August, you say?"

"Yes. That's why I warned you not to stay here until August. I overheard Jules boast to Batoche that no prospectors nosing around here in August would ever see home. He thinks you're prospectors, you know."

"Then he's struck gold and wants to keep it a secret?"

"Corinne and I think so. We've an idea he ships the gold dust and nuggets in bags on that plane and doesn't want anyone to know about

"But why should it come from the Bay?"

"We don't know but he seems to want to hide the direction from which it comes. That's sure. He's nervous as a cat, then, won't even have Indians around the place."

Finlay wondered what he had stumbled into. A plane from the Bay! What did that mean? Then he said: "Mrs. Isadore got the drugged wine intent .d for us. What did he intend to co-drop us in the lake?"

"No, I think he wanted to search you—learn who you were. I was so afraid something would happen. I wanted to warn you. Then I saw that hideous Tete-Blanche. After you left Jules struck Corinne for drinking that wine-struck her in the face. He was like a madman."

"Nice fellow! Of course he knows he can't last long at this game. Already six men who have entered this country have disappeared. The police will be here soon."

"Six men?" she gasped. "I've heard of only two!'

"Six prospectors have disappeared and two men have been wounded. Finlay smiled significantly,

"Your Ilmp, that night!" she suddenly cried, her eyes wide with understanding. "You-you were wounded in the leg on the way here?" "Yes."

"They ambushed you on the Nottaway! But you're all right? Oh, they'll stop at nothing! Do you understand now why I've got to get away?"

"Yes. What was Tele-Blanche doing there that night?"

"I don't know." "Well, don't worry, we'll have you safe at Mategami by August." She gave a deep sigh. For a space they smoked in allence while Finlay's thoughts were busy with the mysterious plane. Then he glanced at her. She was smiling at him through curious eyes.

"Charming gossip we're having on my bathing beach on this lovely July day!" she said ruefully.

Her mood had suddenly changed The compelling charm of her drove from his head all thoughts of Isadore. A beautiful girl sat beside him, desirable, balling. And in her slow smile was veiled challenge.

"You swim here often?"

Her eyes were busy with a trim moceasin toying with the sand. She raised them and her lip curled, "Flahing for an invitation to join the beautiful mermaids? If you are, you're distinctly not invited. We usually swim in our scales, you know."

She flung herself around, facing him, and impulsively took his hand. "What children we are!" she cried. "This is the second time I've ever talked with you, Garry Finlay, and I'm babbling like a sub-deb at her Orat big dance."

"I never met one but I'm sure I'd tion. I could take care of maself. love sub-debs." He found theare her. "Do you know how levely you are and-how dangerous?" he said.

A warm undertone of pink pushed up over her neck and cheeks, She seemed suddenly confused. "It's growing late! I've got to go!" She was on her feet. "You'll take me to Matagami when I write? How can I thank you for daring to come? Oh, it's like a reprieve from a death sentence! I want to dance and sing!" She stood beside her cance grasping her paddle. Her voice quavered: "Au revoir! Very nice and reckless man!" Her eyes danced dangerous-

"When you send word, I'll come!" he said, thickly. He slid her canoe into the water, turned and with a quick movement had her in his arms.

With a swift catch of the breath she flung back her dark head and smiled up at him. He kissed her hair and eyes and responsive mouth "You sorceress!" he choked "You've bewitched me! Courage, midnight eyes! I'll take you to Matagami. Good-by, Beautiful!"

She gave a low laugh as her arm tightened on his neck, and for a moment returned his kisses, then breaking away, leaped into the canoe and paddled off. Reaching the point, she blew a kiss with her hand and passed from sight.

His pulses drumming, Finlay stood at the edge of the water, groping for his mental balance. With her charm and changing moods Lise Demarais had played on his senses as a musician on a harp, run the gamut from laughter to tears. The hard-boiled Garry Finlay had been pliant in her hands as a willow sprout, but in the end she had left him wondering whether she was sincere or a consummate actress,

At the thought he glanced up and down the beach. The shore was deserted. Still under the spell of the girl who had paddled away, he started for the spruce point to meet the Peterboro. Again he felt her arms on his neck, her warm lips, looked into the dancing depths of her eyes. "Acting? What's got into you, Garry Finlay? That girl is straight as a spruce. She's in trouble and frantic to get away and I was the path out. Emotional, of course! Doesn't care a damn for me, but when I lost my head she just couldn't help being human. But she's gorgeous-enchanting!"

He had reached a stretch of shore piled with boulders and had cut back into the bush where the warding was easier when the brittle snap of a dry stick stopped him in his tracks. His body stiffened while his right hand moved under his shirt to the stock of his .45.

"What's that?" he muttered. Again there was a movement in the brush somewhere in front of him. Finlay slipped behind a spruce, his eyes stabbing the surrounding undergrowth. Then, from his rear, came a sound in the scrub and he flattened under the low branches.

"So it was acting after all" A wave of remorse chilled him like a bitter wind as he lay beneath the overhanging boughs. Surrounded as he knew he must be-caught in Isadore's trap-his ears strained for movements of the men who hunted him while his thoughts hung to the girl who had so lightly led him to

"She was so natural," Finlay groaned, inwardly, "so terrible real! And her story seemed so straight. But that was just the balt to catch the mouse! Poor Red and Blaise! What have I done to them?"

With a shiver he brushed her from another man who lay there, a cold day in Portsmouth. fighting man who waited like a cornered wolverine for a movement in the scrub. Sentiment had led him to play the fool against his own judgment and that of his friends But the fool would show Isodore's few days in Boston last week. wolves how his .45 could sing before the Jaws of their trap snapped on him.

Evidently, from the fact that they had not shot him on the beach, their intention was to take him alive. But they must think him armed or they wouldn't have waited. That meant what? Some devilish scheme of Tete-Blanche's? "All right!" Finlay mut-tered. "We'll play it that way! That gives me a break!"

Brush snapped behind him. His eyes flashed back but saw nothing. They had him surrounded but could not reach him without drawing his fire so were playing safe. For minutes he lay rigid, listening. Not a sound marred the serenity of the windless forest. Then, from somewhere in front, came the whistling scream of a hawk, to be answered from the rear.

"They'r signalling! Going to stalk me!" Finlay muttered,

Presently his roving eyes caught the green plumes of a young spruce shivering as if touched by wind. But there was no wind. The spruce top moved into the notched rear sight of the .45. Again the spruce quivered and Finlay glimpsed a pair of glittering eyes in a swart face. Like glass splintered by a hammer, the "b-rang!" of the .45 crashed on the silence of the bush.

There was no face behind the spruce.

"One gone!" Finlay muttered, inching swiftly around to cover his rear, He was just in time. From behind the boll of a Jack-pine, eyes roved the undergrowth seeking his position. Finlay lined his sights. Then the full face and a shoulder edged into view.

"Flambeau!" Again the forest rocked with the thunder of the .45. There was a scream followed by a stillness so intense it hurt the ear-drums. Then the liquid notes of a chickadee broke the spell.

"Two, gone!" But the jaws of the trap were closing on the hunted man. His firing had marked his position. He must move. Quick! Flat on his chest he hunched to the sanctuary of another spruce. How many are there? he wondered. They'll work in close and rush me! They want me alive!

They won't get me, alive! He released the partly emptied cylinder of his gun, ejected the empty shells and pushed in fresh ones. "Where's Tete-Blanche?" he muttered. "I want him for Bob! I promised Bob up there, on the river! I want Tete-Blanche for Bob!"

From three sides came the snapping of twigs as the hunters closed in on the hidden quarry. The eyes of the trapped man blazed with the fighting flame of a bernt at bay. His nerves were ice as he knelt, watching in three directions for the rush that was coming.

Suddenly there were thrashing in the brush. But the concealed man would not be stampeded into showing himself. Then a ring of men simultaneously rushed a few yards, to fade, flattened to the earth. But one never moved again. A slug from the .45 had drilled his forehead. "Three gone!"

"They're close ir, now!" muttered Finlay. "The next one will reach me!" His eyes ceaselessly traversed the surrounding undergrowth stippled with sunlight filtered through the spruce tops. Not a leaf stirred. "Good-by, Red, Blaise! I'm sorry!" he whispered. "So long, Flame, old partner!"

Then five men flung themselves at him. He found the white head of Tele-Blanche and the .45 flamed. Again it roared. They reached him and he fired point-blank into a grimacing face. The face burst into a bloody mask. With his heavy gun he bludgeoned a black head that dove at him. Free, he stumbled back and swung at another. As he did there was a blinding flash of light in his eyes. He sagged to his knees, then to the earth.
